Directions: Complete the following passage by filling in each blank with one word that best fits the context.

Keeping in touch with our friends is an important part of friendship. This does not mean that 48 we have to write or call our friends every day. It does mean, however, that we 49 should care enough about our friends to find out how they are doing from time to time.

People have different habits about keeping in touch with others. Some like to call their friends, sometimes many times 50 a day. Others prefer to e-mail their friends. Still 51 others prefer writing letters so that they can include photos or interesting articles 52 in the envelopes along with their letters. Some even write postcards while they are on vacation 53 and send them to friends.

Every kind of communication is important, It is 54 not important what kind of call we make or letter we send, 55 What is important is that we let others know we care about them.

Part III Reading Comprehension (30 marks)

Directions: Read the following three passages. Each passage is followed by several questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. Choose the one that fits best according to the information given in the passage.

What makes a gift special? Is it the price you see on the gift receipt? Or is it the look on the recipient's face when they receive it that determines the true value? What gift is worth the most?

This Christmas I was debating what to give my father. My dad is a hard person to buy for because he never wants anything. I pulled out my phone to read a text message from my mom saying that we were leaving for Christmas shopping for him when I came across a message on my phone that I had locke	ed. The message was from my father. My eyes fell on a photo of a flower taken in Wyoming.	and underneath a poem by William Blake. The flower, a lone dandelion standing against the	bright blue sky, inspired me. My dad had been reciting those words to me since I was a kid	i. That may even be the reason why I love writing. I decided that there words a sold be an	e ailli to any father

. 69 .

I called back. I told my morn to go without me and that I already created my gift. I sent the photo of the cream-colored flower to my computer and typed the poem on top of it. As I was arranging the details another poem came to mind. The poem was written by Edgar Allan Poe; my dad recited it as much as he did the other. I typed that out as well and searched online for a background to the words of it. The poem was focused around dreaming, and after searching I found the perfect picture. The image was painted with blues and greens and purples, twisting together to create the theme and wonder of a dream. As I watched both poems passing through the printer, the white paper coloring with words that shaped my childhood, I felt that this was a gift that my father would truly appreciate.

Christmas soon arrived. The minute I saw the look on my dad's face as he unwrapped those swirling black letters carefully placed in a cheap frame, I knew I had given the perfect
